

AN INTERESTING BOOK.

Telling About the Cures of Dr. R. C. Flower, of Boston.

Statements of Some of the Wonderful Cures Made by This Extraordinary Practitioner—Many are so Marvelous That They Seem to be Almost Miraculous.

We published a short time ago quite a lengthy article about the professional work of Dr. R. C. Flower, of Boston. We have recently come into possession of a pamphlet devoted to the life and work of Dr. Flower, giving numerous accounts of his MIRACULOUS CURES and almost supernatural triumphs over disease. We believe a review of the same would be highly interesting to our readers. The book reads more like a fairy story than anything else, yet every claim and assertion is substantiated by numerous facts.

We publish below a number of extracts from this book that our readers may know more of the doings of this wonderful physician, who seems to have stirred the earth with his professional triumphs from center to almost circumference. The first chapter is a biographical history of the doctor, which starts out by saying:

For some years Dr. R. C. Flower has startled the Eastern world, from time to time, by performing what has seemed miraculous or supernatural cures. One writer, in describing Dr. Flower's triumph in the sick room, says:

"Sickness is a toy in his hands; in a most phenomenal way he sheds light into the darkest eye, life into the dying form, and robs the sick room of its sufferer and the coffin of its prey."

Dr. Flower has been called to consult over important and bad cases from the Rockies to the Chesapeake, from Canada to the Rio Grande. His greatest ability is seen in desperate cases, and his mightiest feats and most miraculous cures at the death-bed itself.

Dr. Flower is a young man, but thirty-four years of age, smooth face, medium size, very large head. He is a hard student, deep thinker, a man of remarkable quick perception and intuitive faculty, which are said to be marvelous.

"A phenomenal feature in his practice is his method of diagnosing disease. He never asks a patient his trouble, but the instant he takes the hand of a sick person he tells most accurately the disease in all its ramifications. This phenomenal phase of his practice has brought him thousands upon thousands of patients, and it is claimed that out of upward of 100,000 examinations he has never made a mistake."

"In the business world Dr. Flower is as great a wonder as he is in the practice of medicine. His intuitive powers in detecting the actual condition of the markets seem almost infallible. If he buys stocks they go up; if he sells they go down. He has made fortunes for many of his friends, and saved many from ruin."

"He is a man of great individuality, a man of methods, and a man who, from all appearance, does the work of a hundred men." Following is an interesting biography of his professional career. Next is a chapter upon his

MIRACULOUS CURES, which reads more like the curing of the sick, making the lame walk and the blind see, of 1,800 years ago than anything else.

The chapter following, entitled "A MEDICAL WONDER," leads you still further into fascinating realms of what seems to be miracles. Among these startling accounts and miraculous cures is recorded a case of a gentleman for many years a sufferer visiting Dr. Flower, as a last resort, in search of health. As soon as Dr. Flower saw him he said: "You have a live animal in your stomach, and one which belongs to a Southern country. You must have swallowed it many years ago."

The horror-stricken man replied, "I was afraid I had." He then stated that he was in the army, during which time he frequently drank from

"POOLS IN THE FLORIDA SWAMPS," and shortly after leaving there he felt the creature, as the doctor described it in his stomach, and that every minute of his life for the last fifteen years he had been in perfect dread, and pretty much all the time in great agony. Dr. Flower took charge of the case. It was soon apparent that the first remedy was a death blow to the creature, and soon there began to pass away scales and bones and pieces of feet. The man received almost immediate relief, and is today comparatively a well and happy man.

The long letter, headed "MIRACLES, IF SUCH THINGS ARE," written by the editor of the Boston Traveller (which is one of the largest and most reputable and conservative journals of the East), after the most thorough investigation of Dr. Flower and his practice, most always be, at least to the sick, a most interesting collection of facts. He says:

"The readers of the Traveller are well acquainted with the name of Dr. R. C. Flower, of Boston, Mass. In fact, no professional man in America is better known than this successful, energetic, skillful physician of the 'Hub.'"

"His professional standing."

"Professionally, Dr. Flower stands very high, and, with the progressive and liberal physicians, is pre-eminently a leader. His opinion in very critical cases is regarded as final. A distinguished Boston physician of forty years' practice said to your correspondent: 'I regard Dr. Flower as the most wonderful of living physicians, and one of the most wonderful of men. Why, sir, I have called him at different times to see twenty-one of my patients after I had regarded them as incurable, and, furthermore, after I had submitted the cases to the best medical talent in the city, only to have them confirm my opinion, adding that life could last but a short time at longest. Well, out of the twenty-one cases Dr. Flower, after his examinations, pronounced four as incurable.' Reporter—'And did they die?' 'Yes, sir; the longest only lived one hour and fifty minutes. Of the other seventeen, he said in his judgment they would recover if certain treatment was observed. He suggested treatment I had never used, and in some instances never heard of. I followed the directions to the letter, and to my surprise, every one of the seventeen patients got well. I tell you, sir, there is nothing in Dr. Flower's diagnosis of disease; he reads the internal condition of a patient the same as you would an open book.'"

"Personally, Dr. Flower is exceedingly popular, and his friends being largely of the old, leading and representative families of the East gives him great strength at his home. He is a young man, having just passed his thirty-fourth birthday, though to look into his clear, smiling face you would not judge him over twenty-five."

He then gives a number of cures performed by Dr. Flower, which would seem to vie with the miracles of olden times; and were it not for the corroborating proofs and the parties themselves still living testily to their truth, these seemingly extraordinary claims would not be admissible in living print.

We extract the following as a few from almost numberless cases cited, which will give our readers at least a partial idea of Dr. Flower's almost supernatural triumphs over disease and death:

"A TOUCHING SCENE."

"One of the most touching incidents I ever witnessed was that of a patient from near Memphis, Tenn., Mrs. F. C. Bailey. She was a lovely little woman, thirty-seven years of age, a perfect type of Southern beauty. She was small and frail. Her difficulties were numerous—one large and three lesser cancers in the left breast and one on the lip. She had been treated by four of the leading physicians of the South and West, each of which had given her case up as hopeless; two of them stating that under the most favorable circumstances, she could not live more than sixty days. In addition to this she had a heart trouble, peculiar in the family, two sisters and her mother having died with it. After making a thorough examination Dr. Flower said: 'Well, madam, you worry sick people for being plain, but this is a time for extreme candor; nearly all the chances are against your getting well; there are, however, in my judgment, a few chances in your favor. I would very much rather not take your case, but if you still desire me to try, I can only promise to do for you the best I can.' 'This is all we expect you to do,' said the husband, 'and with it, whatever the result is, we will be satisfied.' 'You are my ONLY HOPE,' continued the woman. 'I have come a long way to see you; if you can't help me, I must go home to be eaten up by these horrid cancers.' 'Then, bursting into tears, she sobbed, 'Oh, sir, for my sake, for the sake of my husband, for the sake of my six little children, oh, won't you save me?' This was more than the doctor could stand. He fairly broke down, notwithstanding he sees such a variety of touching scenes every day. He paced the room in a thoughtful, nervous manner, breaking his fingers through his well-combed and even locks. Then, taking a seat by the sufferer, he handed gently to his, he said: 'Don't cry, dear woman; put your trust implicitly and lovingly in a higher, wiser and stronger power than that of earth. I will stand between you and death at any cost, and by the aid of the unseen, summoning to the rescue all the powers I have and can draw, I will break death's scepter so that his spear shall not hurt thee.'"

AND I SWEAR that for the sake of thy home, thy tears, and for the sake of thy helpless babes, thou shalt get well.' These were terrible words, and upon the ears of all they fell like words from the sky. If they were idle words, they were mockery; if true, they seemed more than the voice of man. Immediately he commenced the treatment, and faithfully was it attended to; and in ten weeks and two days, every cancer was removed clear and clean from the breast and the one from the lip, and the heart was well under control, and to-day she is in excellent health."

Another wonderful cancer cure was that of Mrs. W. H. Shaw, of Portland, Me. This philanthropic woman is well known throughout the East, and by her friends as well as her physicians, was regarded for some time as incurable. Dr. Flower with such skill removed the three large cancers as well as thoroughly cleansed her system, that many regarded the cure miraculous. Mrs. Shaw told your correspondent that she wishes her sick person in the world knew what Dr. Flower had done for her, and what he can do, and is doing every day for the sick. "Why," continued this enthusiastic lady, "look what he has done for me. I came to him nearly dead; to-day I am in better health than I have been since early life; he snatched me from the jaws of death, and cured me of my diseases with the ease that a March wind would lift a straw. I tell you, sir, he is a remarkable man. To come into his presence is to feel that his hand is cure."

Dr. Flower's patients are numbered by the thousands. This may sound loud, but it is true. He has thousands of patients all the time.

These, Mr. Editor, are facts given in an unvarnished way, as an exhibition of his powers. Call it what you may, but when it comes to a man standing in the presence of a dying patient, all eaten up and racked with pain, making a prophecy as to the future of the patient, and then go to work and fulfill his own prophecy, which is apparently the changing of natural and inevitable events, I say when it comes to a man doing this constantly, it calls for the honest investigation of the public, rather than sneering criticisms from professional rivals."

He closes his thorough and critical investigation of Dr. Flower and his practice as follows:

"I HAVE HERE GIVEN A vast and wonderful accumulation of facts pertaining to Dr. Flower and his cures. They are facts, cold, solid facts, and they are as startling as a voice from death."

"From the crowds which throng his spacious offices, No. 1,702 Washington street, corner of Chester Park, you might infer that all the sick of the world were seeking at his hands relief. Whether the theory of many, that Dr. Flower holds the key of life, is true or not,

THIS IS TRUE, that he changes in almost a miraculous manner the sick bed into a healthy couch, robs death of its spoil by saving annually thousands from a premature grave. His happy patients thus mysteriously cured live in every land, and upon these joyful homes the sun never sets."

The rest of the book is devoted to Dr. Flower's methods of treatment, of his occasional journeys South and West for the purpose of seeing such patients as need a professional interview, yet are unable to make the journey to Boston; also, a number of testimonials, representing many of the prominent and leading characters of the East. Among these testimonials we notice the strong endorsement of J. Willard Rice, of Boston, ex-Mayor of the city, and brother of Governor Rice, and head of the great manufacturing firm of Rice, Kendall & Co. Mr. Rice says: "I have known Dr. Flower intimately for years. He is a highly educated and cultured man, and I know personally of MANY REMARKABLE CURES, both of ladies and gentlemen, effected by Dr. Flower, whom I unhesitatingly declare to be a wonderful physician, an elegant gentleman, and a valued friend. From the careful reading of this book it will be seen that Dr. Flower held the key of life and death, at least in many instances when hope everywhere else had failed. That his ability to detect disease, let it be ever so subtle and hidden, is more than the natural, and his power to cure the most hopeless cases in death's shadowy domain, speaks strongly of the supernatural. Though in justice to Dr. Flower we should say he does not claim there is anything supernatural about his work. Bearing upon this subject we will quote Dr. Flower's own words: 'Superstition! No, sir! I make no such claim. Such belong to the readers of the divine.'"

"Then, Doctor, how do you account for the cures you are performing daily?" "Your question is one I would rather not answer, but I care where others fail, that I make the blind see, the deaf hear, and the lame walk, and that I rescue from death's jaws the sick and dying when abandoned by all others, and the last vestige of faith has died upon the altar of a blasted hope, is a fact known to tens of thousands, who are living witnesses of these cures."

This exciting and interesting little book, giving a brief history of a more exciting and interesting character, is published by J. Hart Brittain, No. 32 Hawley street, Boston, Mass., and will be sent free to any one sending a two-cent stamp. It should be in the hands of every sick person. It should be read by every one in health."
